INFORMATION:

SECODND UPDATE: On October 6, 2011 at approximately 9:00 am, Shivhan Armstrong turned herself in to Santa Cruz Police Department officers at the Santa Cruz County Jail. Ms. Armstrong had been wanted in connection with the felony assault on a police officer that occurred on September 14, 2011. Both suspects wanted in conjunction with the case are now in custody.

FIRST UPDATE: On October 2, 2011 San Francisco Police arrested Ryan Mang. Mr. Mang was arrested for an alcohol-related violation. When San Francisco Police officers attempted to arrest him he fled. He was arrested after a brief chase and found to be in possession of heroin and drug paraphernalia. Mr. Mang provided a false name to San Francisco Police but his identity was verified and they were able to determine he was wanted on our felony warrant. Mr. Mang acknowledged to San Francisco Police that he had been ‘all over the news’ for a Santa Cruz incident. He was booked into jail in San Francisco County and the two agencies are coordinating their respective investigations. Shivhan Armstrong, his passenger during the felony assault, still remains at-large.

BACKGROUND: On September 14, 2011 at approximately 10:00 pm, a Santa Cruz Police Department officer spotted a suspicious truck in a residential neighborhood in the 200 block of Jackson St. The officer pulled-up and spoke to the two occupants. He began to run a preliminary check on them as well as their vehicle. The vehicle had paper dealership plates (it appears that the actual license plates had been removed). Just as the officer was receiving information from dispatch advising him the truck was stolen, the driver started the truck and pulled away. The officer was standing at the driver’s door and was dragged approximately 30 feet as the truck pulled away. He was eventually thrown from the side of the truck, narrowly escaping being run over.

Additional officers responded and eventually located the stolen truck abandoned on Isbel Court. Witnesses reported the occupants were picked up by another car and driven from the scene. Officers processed the stolen truck and located heroin and property believed to have been stolen. Based on information collected during processing, and statements from the officer, police have identified the suspects as Ryan Mang and Shivhan Armstrong. Both Mr. Mang and Ms. Armstrong have extensive local criminal histories.

The injured officer was transported to Dominican Hospital by the shift sergeant. He was treated last night and released this morning. He sustained a number of injuries associated with being dragged by the vehicle. He will remain off duty while he recovers from his injuries.
